Background & Purpose

- No open-admission animal shelter in the county.
- City of Bryant already has plans to build a new animal shelter.
- This is a prime opportunity to build an Animal Shelter Cooperative.
- The City of Bryant already has the land, and it has been identified as an excellent location for a larger shelter with room for future growth, community engagement, access to the trail systems, with high visibility which will provide opportunities for local adoption and less euthanasia.
- Bryant Animal Shelter already has a good reputation in the community as an open-intake, no suffering animal shelter and the department's leadership and staff as well as the community's leadership have both the desire and the ability to provide excellent service to all the participating communities in Saline County based on past support of the animal shelter and its programs. The current shelter is well-managed, progressive, flexible, 100% compliant with state & federal laws & at a point that it is poised to increase its outreach and animal-housing capabilities.

Major Differences from Past Partnerships & Animal Housing Contacts

- Members would be charged annually based on population instead of by the individual animal. When the payments would be due would be negotiated one on one with the partners.
  - Makes it easier for the jurisdiction to budget, as there are no surprises.
  - There is no disconnect between the citizens' needs, their perception of the partnership and the animals that can come into the shelter.
    - Most shelters have contracts with agencies that charge by the individual animal or service provided. This stops that. The members are charged per capita, and just like the City of Bryant shelter operates now, there will be a set budget, and it would be the Director's responsibility to work within that budget.
- All members would be asked to sign multi-year agreements (generally 10-years) with annual increases built into the contract.
- The City of Bryant has offered to own, maintain and operate the shelter under the City of Bryant and all employees of the shelter would be City of Bryant employees. Jurisdictions (or their citizens) would be responsible for bringing animals to the shelter, Bryant ACOs would not provide those services, except within the City of Bryant (For example, Saline County has a deputy that is currently assigned to handle animal problems.)
- Each jurisdiction would be asked to draft uniform ordinances regarding animal holding, record keeping, etc (anything that directly affects the shelter's operation) which would fall into line with the City of Bryant ordinances (so there would be no confusion within the shelter, and no jurisdictional confusion.)
- City of Bryant Animal Control Officers would be given authority by partners to issue or serve citations for a limited number of violations which may occur in other jurisdictions in order to facilitate return to owners of impounded animals. An example of which include, but is not limited to: failure to provide proof of rabies vaccination.

Funding - Construction, Ongoing Operational and Maintenance Costs

American Rescue Plan funds, as the project meets approximately 85% of the Guiding Principles as set by the Quorum Court for these funds.

- Large, transformative project
- Positively impact most of Saline County
- Project is easy to quantify, and if 100% funded, would meet the completion deadline of 2026.
- Would include partnerships between local governments and supports public-private partnerships by potentially offering a location for private veterinarians, animal trainers and other non-profits whose goals and principles fall in line with those of the shelter, a place to meet, perform, and has the potential to provide many additional services involving pets to the community.

Additional Funding would be provided by impact and annual fees charged to participating members. Additionally:

- Fees and donations that are collected by the shelter would go into a fund which would serve to help off-set the costs of operation, provide medical care or help cover transportation costs to out of state partner shelters and rescues.
- Fines assessed by the district courts for violations would be kept by the jurisdiction in which the offense occurred, with the exception of restitution which would be paid to the shelter and partners would agree to assist the shelter in obtaining restitution orders from their local courts, documentation of these requests would be provided to prosecutors by the shelter.
- Partners would agree to keep in close communication with their local prosecutors and provide information regarding upcoming court dates, plea negotiations and other court decisions to the shelter in a timely manner, especially so when animals are being retained at the shelter pending adjudication, or restitution requests.
- The size and cost to build the shelter will be determined by the number of partners.
- Impact fees to assist with the costs involved in building a shelter to accommodate the anticipated number of annual impounds from all partners will be determined by the number of partners.
- Those communities which opt to not sign on as a partner at the beginning of the project, but request to join the cooperative later on, will be required to pay impact fees equal to the amount that they would have paid at the onset of the partnership adjusted for inflation, and may not necessarily be approved at the time of the request based on current occupation levels at the shelter.
